Greetings

Thank you as always for your continued support.

From this catalogue, we are omitting the tasting notes for each wine. This, in turn, has enabled us to add more pages introducing new wines. In addition, the Recommendations page features a wide variety of Roses, both in terms of varietals used and winemaking techniques. Although Roses are often overlooked, each winemaker, varietal, and production method expresses each wine's individuality. Please enjoy them with food.

For our feature story, we spoke with Blair Guthrie, an up-and-coming California winemaker who is head winemaker at Stewart Cellars and Guthrie Family Wines. Last year, Blair visited Japan for the first time with his wife and co-owner of Stewart Cellars, Caroline Stewart Guthrie, and toured the Japanese wine market, which is very different from that of the United States. It was interesting to see how he compares the creative work of an artist carving a sculpture from marble with the work of a winemaker who creates wine from grapes.

Continuing our focus on the U.S., we highlight The Eyrie Vineyards, a producer acclaimed as the pioneer of today's Oregon wine industry, and especially Pinot Noir. The Eyrie Vineyards Pinot Noir is a blend of fruit from five estate vineyards. Since 2012, The Eyrie has produced small quantities of its Pinot Noir Single Vineyard Series that express the characteristics of each vineyard. We have created a comparative set of the five wines from the 2018 vintage. Don't miss this rare, comparative tasting opportunity.

In recent years, attention has been focused on non-alcoholic drinks that go well with meals, and it was difficult to find a non-alcoholic wine that we liked. Finally, we found a non-alcoholic sparkling tea called 'Saicho', which has been very popular thanks to you. Alongside the 200ml bottles, we have started selling full 750ml bottles of Saicho sparkling teas.

From wines to glass rental, we hope you will continue to support Village Cellars, as we strive to meet your needs.

VC Spring Recommendations — Rosé —

Rosé is not just the perfect wine to celebrate the freshness of spring—it's a delightful choice for any season. It makes a wonderful welcome drink and pairs beautifully with light meals, as well as seafood pasta, salt-grilled octopus, and squid. Made by pressing red grapes and fermenting the lightly colored juice, Rosé varies in style depending on the winemaker's choice of grape varietals and methods. Some, like Voyager Estate, blend red and white grapes and co-ferment them, but red and white wines are never mixed after fermentation. County Line suggests pairing their Rosé with fish tacos and feta cheese salads, though it also complements delicate, authentic kaiseki cuisine. If you're unsure whether to choose white or red wine, a dry Rosé is the obvious choice. Like white wine, it is best enjoyed well chilled.

Coonawarra is a unique region in which the GI (Geographical Indication) is based on the 'Terra Rossa' soil, consisting of a layer of red sandy loam over limestone. Although it is 60kms inland, it is also influenced by sea breezes that blow across the plains, and grapes mature slowly. Bowen Estate, whose vineyards are all Terra Rossa soil, has been producing low-yield, high-quality fruit by hand since 1989 using a unique arch pruning method. 2022 was an ideal mild vintage. Both of these wines beautifully express the Coonawarra and can be enjoyed now, but aging will add further complexity.

The Eyrie Vineyards: Five Single-Vineyard Pinot Noirs 2018

Dundee Hills, Willamette Valley, Oregon

※ Numbered in the order of planting.

The Eyrie Vineyards, the Pioneer in Oregon Pinot Noir

The first Pinot Noir was planted in Dundee Hills in 1965 by a young David Lett, soon after completing his viticulture studies at the University of California, Davis. Still in his mid-20s, he moved to the Willamette Valley with 3,000 cuttings, convinced it was the perfect climate for Pinot Noir. In 1966, he established The Eyrie Vineyards, ushering in a new era for the Oregon wine industry.

David and his wife Diana cultivated their first vineyard, 'The Eyrie,' on a south-facing slope with enough incline to eliminate spring frost damage, access to the volcanic soil at the top of the slope, and at an altitude that was neither too high nor too low, ensuring adequate heat for the grapes to ripen. Supported by extensive research including into Jory soil*, altitude, microclimate, and actual site selection, Pinot Noir has become the representative varietal in Oregon. The Eyrie has been organically grown since the beginning, and today all five estate vineyards are certified organic, while also practicing regenerative agriculture** that emphasizes biodiversity. David's son and second-generation winemaker, Jason Lett, co-owner with his mother Diana, stays true to The Eyrie's founding philosophy, while continuing to evolve and enhance its practical application.

* Jory is Oregon's representative soil, ideal for grape cultivation. Basalt was deposited by volcanic flows 15-17 million years ago, and over time the surface bedrock decomposed into iron-rich red soil covering a deep layer of rounded basalt boulders.

** No tilling, no irrigation, no fertilizer. Regenerative agriculture not only grows grapes, but also protects and revitalizes the soil and the natural environment surrounding it, enhancing the ecosystem.

◀ Five Estate vineyards ▶

1 The Eyrie Original Vines

Elevation: 88-139m. South facing, rolling east and west. Planted 1966-74.

Pinot Noir: 2.8ha. Clones: Wadenswil, Pommard, Upright.

This vineyard is the original planting of Pinot Noir in the Willamette Valley. After extensive research, David Lett planted 3,000 Pinot cuttings here. Named for a pair of red-tailed hawks that made their nest, an eyrie, in a fir tree overlooking the site.

2 Daphne

Elevation: 279-292m. West facing. Planted 1974-84.

Pinot Noir: 0.6ha. Clone: Pommard.

A vineyard with soil less than 25cm deep, spread over huge rocks. Windy and cool, the harsh environment results in small grape clusters. The fruit is concentrated and herbal, reminiscent of stone. Named for a longtime friend of The Eyrie.

3 Roland Green Farm

Elevation: 184-245m. South facing. Planted 1988-present.

Pinot Noir: 2.0ha. Clones: Pommard, Wadenswil.

Near-perfect location for producing textured wines with depth and finesse. Originally self-rooted, the newly planted Pinot Noir is on phylloxera-resistant rootstock, a variety well suited to the expected rise in temperatures. Named for David Lett's father.

Single-vineyard Pinot Noir

The Eyrie 'Estate Pinot Noir' is made from fruit from the five estate vineyards, from the lowest elevation Sisters vineyard to the highest elevation Daphne vineyard. All of the vineyards are over 25 years old, and the individuality of each vineyard is clearly evident in the wine. Since 2012, the Eyrie has made small quantities of five single-vineyard Pinot Noirs named after the vineyards (195-442 cases each). They are produced identically, with the same fermentation regimes of wild yeast and small fermentation vessels, followed by aging in blends of cooperage for 17 months with 12% new oak, to express the differences in soil, location, slope, and vine age of each vineyard. We purchased two dozen of each of the five single-vineyard Pinot Noirs from the 2018 vintage. We'd like you to take this opportunity to compare them, so are offering them at a special price.

Our feature story: Blair Guthrie (Napa Valley, California)

Winemaking full of passion and creativity.

— Weaving together two brands at the opposite ends of the fine-wine spectrum

Blair Guthrie (Stewart Cellars Winemaker & Vineyard Manager, Guthrie Family Wines Owner & Winemaker)

STEWART

Guthrie
Family
Wines

What does the future of wine look like? Blair Guthrie, winemaker at Stewart Cellars and sister brand Guthrie Family Wines in Napa Valley, is busy shaping the answers. He tells a fast-moving story that weaves the traditions of making premium Napa Valley Cabernet with the championing of lesser-known varietals, the experience of working in custom crush wineries to the precision sculpting of fine wines, and the free form of an artist exploring the broader possibilities of the wine world.

<Interviewer: Dion Lenting, Kiwi Copy, January 2025>

How did you get into winemaking – and to Napa Valley?

I'm originally from New Zealand, and grew up outside of Christchurch in the town of Rangiora. I'm not from the wine industry at all, I was a beer drinking rugby boy. When I finished high school I studied graphic design, and worked as a designer. I've always been an artist and a creative person, but realized after a few years it was turning digital and I didn't want to be stuck in front of a computer. My body wants to go 100 miles an hour all the time. Wondering what to do next, I was accepted into an oenology and viticulture course at Tairāwhiti Polytechnic in Gisborne (now Eastern Institute of Technology). I originally thought I'll be out in the vineyard, driving a tractor, but within the first couple of weeks I knew winemaking would be a platform for me to be creative and artistic.

Working at a custom crush

After completing the course I was immediately hired to work in South Australia, at a custom crush facility. It was an amazing opportunity to be part of the building out of an entire winery, the custom crush, working with consulting winemakers. It allowed me to explore different avenues and philosophies on winemaking – I like to say I got 8 years of industry knowledge crammed into 3 years. During my time in Australia I came over to California to do an internship at Paul Hobbs Winery. That's where I met Caroline, now my wife, who was also working as an intern. My visa ended, and I went back to my job in Australia. We were prepping for harvest, when one of our main workers pulled out at the last minute. So I called Caroline up and said, 'do you want to come to Australia and work with me at a winery'. 6 weeks later she was in South Australia and we lived and worked together at BK Wines and the Adelaide Hills Winery in Adelaide.

Putting down roots in Napa Valley

in 2011 we came back to the U.S. and got married. I worked for Paul Hobbs again briefly, then at Kunde Winery, a 5th generation winery in Sonoma. I was fresh to the U.S. and thinking how to learn as much about Californian winemaking and philosophy as quickly as possible. Kunde was a big operation, handling 3,000 tons. Besides Kunde wines, we made wines for Trader Joe's and Costco, and private brands for other wineries covering many different varietals.

Caroline was already working in Stewart Cellars, a small winery her father had founded in 2000. It was slowly growing, and around 2011 he was ready to turn into a full company, and she joined them. In 2012 I started helping out, and in 2014 came on full time as the winemaker, and at the same time started Guthrie Family Wines as a side business.

How do you approach winemaking for Stewart Cellars?

Stewart Cellars is about making 'the best of the best' – getting the best fruit, from the best vineyards, and making the best wines you can. We started with Napa Valley and Bordeaux varietals, and have since expanded to Chardonnay, Pinot and Rose from other areas, but really focusing on detailed, premium, high-end winemaking. In Napa Valley, you are making and competing against some of the best winemakers in the world and I love that.

We always start with amazing ingredients, with the aim of expressing the vineyard and the vintage. We are fairly minimalist in the winery. My idea is to get everything I can out of the fruit – with Stewart Cellars I'm a sculptor, I want to start with a full block of material then trim it back over time to what I want it to be. So heavier extractions for more colour and tannin, then we mould and sculpt through fermentation and aging to soften and build out the palette.

Sourcing the best fruit

For the longest time we have buying fruit for Stewart Cellars – Napa Valley is very expensive, so buying a vineyard was out of our reach. We turned this to an advantage by finding the best variety, growing in the best area, on the best vineyard, so we aren't limited to an estate. I can go to Sonoma Mountain to get Chardonnay, to St. Helena for Cabernet, and Charles Valley for Merlot, and not be

“This is the core flagship wine at Stewart Cellars and serves as our business card. It is purely Napa Valley Cabernet from the north end and towards the south end of the Valley, a hotter drier climate, and a cooler more ocean influenced climate. So ripe flavours and plush tannins up north, and herbal notes and rocky tannins and more acidity down south – so that's where blending comes in.”

Stewart Tri-County Cabernet Sauvignon 2022

Origin: Mendocino County, Sonoma County, and Napa County, California

Varietal: Cabernet Sauvignon Alc. 14.5%

RRP ¥12,000

Harvested in September. Destemmed and fermented in stainless steel tanks with whole grapes. Barrel aged for 10 months (40% new).

“Over the years I've made Mendocino Cabs, Napa Valley Cabs, Sonoma Cabs, so the idea was how can we piece together to make an amazing Cab which is just the same quality as our Napa Valley Cab at a more affordable price. Napa Valley is the workhorse with ripe Cabernet, Mendocino being a lot cooler has more red fruit and cherry notes, and Sonoma gives more earth tones and great acidity. Obviously the proportions of the blend changes from year to year to reflect the vintage.”

Stewart Cellars and Guthrie Family Wines

Michael Stewart established Stewart Cellars in 2000 to handcraft the Napa Valley wines he loved to drink in his previous life as founder and owner of a technology company in Texas. He was joined in 2006 by his son James and in 2013 by daughter Caroline, as co-proprietors, and in 2014 by Caroline's husband Blair Guthrie as winemaker and vineyard manager. Blair and Caroline launched Guthrie Family Wines in 2014. Stewart Cellars leases and farms the Juliana Vineyard in Pope Valley in the Napa Valley AVA. In 2022, they purchased the Montecillo Vineyard in the Moon Mountain Appellation in Sonoma, in which they are slowly grafting in new varietals.

In 2024 Stewart Cellars produced 9,000 cases covering 22 individual wines, and Guthrie Family is expanding production from 2,000 to 4,000 cases in 2025.

Montecillo Vineyard

Winery & Cellar Door

shoehorned into one location. Then we build long-term relationships with our growers. That's important because you can't make wine over one vintage, it takes you 4 or 5 years to figure out a vineyard: how it grows, should you be picking early or late. Compared to Paul Hobbs, I probably pick a little bit earlier, I think you get a better expression of terroir, and acidity is really important for freshness, and a little less alcohol to better complement fine food. We inoculate all our fermentations, I have specific yeasts strains I've chosen over the years I really like, and it is different for each wine. A lot of that started out as a security blanket, using yeast strains to help successfully complete fermentation. Our reds age for 2 years in the barrel and are bottled unfiltered, so it is really important to ferment all the sugar and complete malolactic fermentation 100 percent. You don't want anything left over, because it is only a food source for bad bacteria.

Then we barrel age. Every Stewart wine except Rose and Sauvignon Blanc goes into the barrel – the Bordeauxs for two years, the Burgundies for one. It is all French oak and the percentage of new depends on the varietal: for Pinot Noir we use 28-30 percent new oak, the rest is old. For the Bordeauxs it can be between 40 and 85 percent new depending on the wine. It takes several years to learn which vineyards and lots can or can't handle a lot of new oak.

After two years comes blending. That's when the fun begins. After fermentation I know from experience what works and what doesn't with oak, what coopers to use, so I barrel them down as if they were going to be bottled as a single lot, treating every barrel with the utmost importance, like a pure single vineyard varietal. At blending, we get the bonus of filling in the holes and gaps. Then we bottle, and after 6 to 12 months release it.

A more natural approach for Guthrie Family wines

Guthrie Family started as my creative outlet, to explore the 'no rules' side of winemaking, different varietals, different styles of fermentation, focusing on organic fruit and minimalism – as opposed to producing the best wine in the world at Stewart Cellars. I have a philosophy and direction I want to go, but am quite happy to snake my way there. I make the wines for a purpose and time. For example, the whole cluster Syrah aged in amphoras is made to drink in wintertime, when it's cold outside and there's a stew on the stove.

For Guthrie, I use only organic grown fruit as a minimum, biodynamic and regenerative farmed fruit if I can get it. Then in the winery avoid any additions if possible, try to limit it to sulphur. All native fermentations of sugars and malic acids, and taking a minimalist approach to remove as many steps as possible. The fruit is all handpicked, I don't destem any, the white goes straight into a press and the reds go straight into a fermenter whole cluster with stems and everything. So we remove that entire step from the process.

Then with fermentation, avoiding pumps where possible, I do a lot of foot stomping. Because the wines are whole cluster we get a lot of carbonic fermentation. For the reds it is very much a style, I can make a red like a Syrah but it will have an underlying tone of the carbonic character you get in Beaujolais, all the way through to pure carbonic reds that get no maceration, and are just like a Beaujolais Nouveau. Fruit goes in, don't touch it, let it go through carbonic fermentation, and then press. If we do maceration it is all foot stomping and a little punch down with tools. For the whites it's a direct press off into the fermentation vessels to ferment naturally. I usually put them in the cold room to try and keep them pretty cold while fermenting, because I love light, aromatic whites. I'm trying to create a Sauvignon Blanc and Vermentino that is linear, fresh and vibrant.

Do the two brands inspire mutual evolution?

Yes, I take things from both and intermix all the time, that's the joy of it for me. Over the years as I gained more experience and confidence in my own ability, and seeing the dynamic of the market shift and what people want changing, going in that direction. For Stewart Cellars we traditionally used 225-liter barriques, but are now slowly moving into larger 500-liter puncheons. I also do some native fermentations to expand expression until halfway through fermentation, then I'll inoculate to get a pure and clean finish. In the last two years we've started doing more whole cluster fermentation in the Pinot and Grenache. I experimented with 10 percent, and for our last harvest increased it to 40 percent.

Ultimately, we're looking at creating a winery that has the culture to stand the test of time, with brands known for elegance.

Stewart Sonoma Mountain Chardonnay 2022

Origin: Sonoma Mountain, California

Varietal: Chardonnay Alc. 14.4%

RRP ¥9,500

Grapes are hand-picked and pressed whole-cluster. Barrel fermentation and aging for 10 months (29% new).

“ The vineyards on the hills of Sonoma Mountain get a lot of fog and cold air rolling in off the ocean and won't start warming up until about 11:00. It slows growth so we pick the vineyard really late – often the same time as Napa Cab. It's an amazing vineyard right up on the hill, with thin soils so the vines get stressed and get good concentration in the fruit. It lacks a bit of natural acidity, so we adjust the malolactic fermentation depending on the year.”

Guthrie Family Wines Pufferfish Red Wine 2022

Origin: California

Varietals: Zinfandel 81% / Carignan 8% / Petite Sirah 6% / Chenin Blanc 5% Alc. 14.1%

RRP ¥6,200

Organically grown grapes are whole bunch macerated and carbonic fermented with native yeast. Aged in stainless steel tanks for 4.5 months. No barrels are used.

“ I make this wine to balance my creativity with the meticulous winemaking of Stewart Cellars. I don't use anything other than grapes, except for a minimal amount of SO2 for stability. It's a simple method of unfining and unfiltered wine. It's lower in alcohol, high in acidity, and has clean, fresh, vibrant berries. Enjoy this 'adult fruit punch' with layered flavours and a touch of residual sugar.”

Saicho Sparkling Tea: Elevating Non-Alcoholic
Pairing with 750ml Bottles & Global Collaborations

The Evolution of Saicho in Japan

If you're in the hospitality business, or have chosen to moderate your alcohol consumption, you know the challenge of finding a truly food-friendly, non-alcoholic option.

Most alternatives are either too simple, too sweet, or lack the complexity needed to stand alongside well-paired wines. That's exactly why we brought Saicho Sparkling Tea to Japan.

Saicho isn't just another alcohol-free beverage; it's crafted with serious food pairing in mind. This meticulous process begins with exceptional single-origin tea leaves, gently cold-brewed for 24 hours to extract their most nuanced flavours. The tea is then artfully balanced with carefully selected grape juice, creating the perfect harmony of acidity, tannins, and a luxuriously full mouthfeel. The result? A sparkling tea that offers depth, structure, and elegance—qualities that have earned it a place in over 60 Michelin-starred restaurants worldwide.

In Japan, the 200ml bottles have been well received since their introduction in 2023, both on- and off-premises. They pair seamlessly with wide-ranging cuisines, as well as finding success as an aperitif offering a sophisticated alternative to Champagne.

The 750ml Bottle: Expanding Opportunities

While 200ml remains a key format in Japan's market, 750ml bottles account for over two-thirds of Saicho's total sales globally. Why?

 By-the-glass service
Perfect for brunches, afternoon teas, and non-alcoholic pairing menus.

 Retail gifting
The elegant gift boxes make it a premium alternative to wine.

And as added bonus, Saicho doesn't suffer from oxidation to the same extent as wine. Properly sealed and pressure maintained, it maintains quality for up to a week in the fridge. This has greatly helped the adoption of 750ml bottles in hospitality. In markets like Hong Kong, the demand for 750ml bottles has surged, particularly in premium retail settings such as Citisuper, where consumers are seeking high-end, alcohol-free alternatives for home consumption and gifts.

Supporting Sommeliers & Global Initiatives

Saicho actively invests in the sommelier community. In the UK, Saicho is the exclusive non-alcoholic sponsor of the Top 100 Sommelier Awards, a strategic initiative that has helped build relationships with the talents shaping food culture.

Additionally, Saicho's "Art of Pairing" initiative brings together top chefs and sommeliers to create unique dishes that highlight the versatility of sparkling tea. This campaign, shared across social media and industry networks, fosters engagement within the Saicho community.

Saicho has also been collaborating with luxury hotels to create an unforgettable experience for their customers while doing good deeds. Last October, they partnered with the Shangri-La at The Shard, London to host the Pink Afternoon Tea, a month-long event for Breast Cancer Awareness Month, where Saicho's full range was featured. Instagram Why Saicho Now?

With more diverse clientele and a growing demand for premium non-alcoholic options, Saicho is well-positioned to meet this shift. Whether for by-the-glass service, curated pairings, or luxury retail, Saicho provides an elegant solution for venues looking to offer something beyond traditional wines and spirits.

If you're looking to expand your non-alcoholic selection without compromising on quality, now is the time to explore Saicho Sparkling Tea.

SAICHO

Charlie and Natalie Winkworth-Smith, a young couple in their 30s who founded Saicho Sparkling Tea, met while studying for their PhDs in Food Science at a British university. As a wine-loving husband and alcohol-allergic wife, they set out to develop a luxurious non-alcoholic drink with the aroma, taste, and mouthfeel that enhances food like wine. The result is Saicho Sparkling Teas which provide the perfect no-alcohol complement to fine dining.

It took them two years just to select and source the leaves for their Jasmine, Hojicha, and Darjeeling teas, with repeated tastings and analysis to balance acidity, sugar, and tannins. Production methods that leverage their study in food chemistry, such as 24-hour low-temperature extraction, and attention to quality ingredients give Saicho Sparkling Teas Champagne-like fine bubbles and aromas.

Saicho is named after the Japanese monk who brought tea seeds from China and planted the first tea in Japan at Mt Hiei (Shiga) in 805.

Saicho (767-822)

Exotic bottle design full of luxury
Bold decorations on the bottle necks feature birds that symbolize the country of origin of each tea (Crane, Jasmine; Pheasant, Hojicha; Peacock, Darjeeling). Matching the superb quality of the tea, the bottle design looks right at home while being served in first-class hotels in the United Kingdom, Hong Kong and Singapore.

Creating New Value in Wine at Village Cellars

Since its establishment in 1987, Village Cellars has been committed to importing and selling delicious and affordable wines that weren't readily available at the time, starting with Australian wines, with the aim of 'meeting the needs of the market and carefully responding to them one-on-one' to further our customers' enjoyment of wine.

Starting with connecting wine lovers with wines produced by small family-owned wineries, we added long-term aging in our own temperature-controlled warehouse and museum releases that bring out the true value of wines. With Plumm Glasses, Glazmataz and Argon winesave Pro we grew our support of a rich and functional wine lifestyle, and the Copito Project provides new opportunities for expanding wine tastings.

Looking to the future, we will continue working to create new value so you can enjoy wine more freely and easily.

Loved by many
for high quality and convenience
